FLIGHTS from Southend to Dublin will be suspended from next month. Flybe has announced.

The budget airline says the route will be suspended from April 13 following a review of the service.

Paul Simmons, chief commercial officer, said: "Flybe has a disciplined approach to the routes it operates, which means we continually review our network to ensure that we offer the right choice of destinations for our customers.

"As part of a recent review, we have taken the decision to suspend this route with effect from 13th April 2015 as passenger numbers regrettably continue to remain below those projected.

"Passengers who have booked to fly on this route are being contacted and offered an alternative flight or a full refund.

"We sincerely apologise for any inconvenience this may cause our customers."
